Course Description
This course surveys the history of the United States from the end of the Civil War to the present. It explores the social, cultural, political, economic, diplomatic, and military developments that shaped the nation over the last 150 years. It aims to help students improve their critical thinking skills by analyzing multiple perspectives of historical events, by participating in discussion sessions, and through written assignments and exams designed to encourage clear, well-formulated arguments. In short, it seeks to provide students with the tools to become historically-informed citizens of the United States and the world.

Required Books
Philip Caputo, A Rumor of War (Holt, 1977/1996)

All course texts are available at the CU Bookstore and on reserve at Norlin Library. Caputo can also be easily found through online booksellers.

Grading
Exam One 20%
Exam Two 20%
Final Exam 30%
Papers (10% each) 20%
Part./Attendance 10%

Exams
This course will have two in-class exams, worth 20% each, and a final exam worth 30% of your final grade. Each test will consist of short identification questions and one longer essay. The final exam will cover the last third of the course and will also include one essay that more broadly examines the entire semester.
Papers
One of the goals of this course is to help students improve their writing. As such, it will include two 3-4 page papers, each worth 10% of your final grade. The first paper will ask you to make an argument based on documents from the Reading the American Past collection. It will explore the major issues of late 1800s and early 1900s America. The second paper will require you to engage with Philip Caputo’s Vietnam War memoir, A Rumor of War. I will pass out more specific paper prompts approximately two weeks before the due date of each paper. Papers will be penalized 1/3 of a letter grade for each day late.

Feel free to see me in office hours to discuss drafts of your essays or any other questions you have about writing. I am also willing to review electronic drafts if given enough notice. I strongly encourage you to take advantage of CU’s Writing Center in Norlin Library. In many ways, the people there can help you even more than I can. The Writing Center’s website (www.colorado.edu/pwr/writingcenter.html) offers more information about its services. Additionally, the History Department provides many useful suggestions for improving your writing under the “Paper Guidelines” section on its website (www.colorado.edu/history/guidelines/index.html). This site also has a helpful section on referencing guidelines. Please keep in mind, though, that it may not discuss every type of citation that you will need to use for your essays.

Attendance and Participation

Although I will not be taking attendance in each lecture, attendance is mandatory for our class discussions of documents from Reading the American Past, of A Rumor of War, and of other primary source material provided by me. Your participation/attendance grade (10% of your overall grade) will drop one full letter grade for each scheduled discussion session you miss after your first unexcused absence.

The current dates for class discussion are: 8/27, 9/8, 9/15, 10/8, 10/22, 11/12, 11/17, 12/1

It is in your best interest, however, to attend every lecture session, as the exams will include a significant amount of material not discussed in the book or listed on the lecture PowerPoints. In such a small class, it will also be quite noticeable if you are regularly absent. If I feel this policy is being abused, I reserve the right to begin taking attendance. If this occurs, you will receive advance notice of such a change.

Active participation in these discussions is crucial to succeeding in this course. I will announce which documents from Reading the American Past to focus on each week and which ones to revisit for our discussion sessions approximately one week before each session. I will also occasionally interrupt my lectures to have shorter discussions about your thoughts on some of the topics we cover. Participation in these conversations can also help your final grade.

As you do each week’s readings, think about them critically and analytically, in order to assess how they relate to one another, the week’s topics, the course’s themes, and current events. Additionally, particularly for the readings from Reading the American Past, think about the main arguments/theses of each source, the strengths and weaknesses of the authors’ arguments, and if you agree with their conclusions. Review the questions after each document and the comparative questions at the end of each chapter. These types of questions will form the basis of many of our discussions. During our conversations, I encourage you to share your ideas and views, even if you are uncertain about them or think your perspective may be unpopular. I will do my part to maintain a respectful, comfortable classroom environment, and it is necessary that you do so as well.

Note: It is not possible to earn an A in the course without participating in discussions.

Additional Information

Disability Statement: If you qualify for accommodations because of a disability, please submit a letter to me from Disability Services in a timely manner so that your needs may be addressed. Disability Services determines accommodations based on documented disabilities. Contact: 303-492-8671, Willard 322, or http://www.colorado.edu/disabilityservices/

Decorum Statement: Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. Students who fail to adhere to behavioral standards may be subject to discipline. Faculty have the professional responsibility to treat students with understanding, dignity and respect, to guide classroom discussion and to set reasonable limits on the manner in which students express opinions. Additional information may be found at http://www.colorado.edu/policies/classbehavior.html

Honor Code: All students of the University of Colorado at Boulder are responsible for knowing and adhering to the academic integrity policy of this institution. Violations of this policy may include: cheating, plagiarism, aid of academic dishonesty, fabrication, lying, bribery, and threatening behavior. All incidents of academic misconduct shall be reported to the Honor Code Council honor@colorado.edu; 303-725-2273). Students who are found to be in violation of the academic integrity policy will be subject to both academic sanctions from the faculty member and non-academic sanctions (including but not limited to university probation, suspension, or expulsion). Additional information on the Honor Code can be found at http://www.colorado.edu/policies/honor.html

Religious Observance: Campus policy regarding religious observances requires that faculty make every effort to reasonably and fairly deal with all students who, because of religious obligations, have conflicts with scheduled exams, assignments or required attendance. If you have a potential class conflict because of religious observance, you must inform me of that conflict within three weeks of the start of classes. See policy details at http://www.colorado.edu/policies/fac_relig.html

Sexual Harassment: The University of Colorado Policy on Sexual Harassment applies to all students, staff and faculty. Sexual harassment is unwelcome sexual attention. It can involve intimidation, threats, coercion, or promises or create an environment that is hostile or offensive. Harassment may occur between members of the same or opposite gender and between any combination of members in the campus community: students, faculty, staff, and administrators. Harassment can occur anywhere on campus, including the classroom, the workplace, or a residence hall. Any student, staff or faculty member who believes s/he has been sexually harassed should contact the Office of Sexual Harassment (OSH) at 303-492-2127 or the Office of Judicial Affairs at 303-492-5550. Information about the OSH and the campus resources available to assist individuals who believe they have been sexually harassed can be obtained at http://www.colorado.edu/odh/
